The speaker explains about The Code of Conduct related to teaching and learning in academic institutions outlines the values and standards that institutions must uphold in the classroom and related educational activities. The Code emphasizes values such as respect, honesty, fairness, and integrity. Research and development towards institute growth involves the process of gathering data, analysing it, and using the information to inform decisions that lead to growth and improvement within the institution. This process may include assessing the current state of the institution, identifying areas for improvement, and implementing strategies to achieve those improvements.
