Brief about Expert/Speaker:

The R&D Orientation program was conducted to create awareness among students about the importance of research and innovation in academic and professional growth. The session highlighted the role of Research and Development in building critical thinking, problem-solving skills, and a scientific approach among learners. The resource persons explained various stages of research, including idea generation, literature review, experimentation, data analysis, and publication. Students were encouraged to explore interdisciplinary research opportunities and utilize institutional facilities such as laboratories, research centers, and online resources. The orientation also emphasized ethical research practices, proper documentation, and the significance of publishing quality papers in reputed journals. Information about funding opportunities, project guidelines, and mentorship support available within the institution was also provided. The esteemed speakers, DTV Dharmendra Rao, G. Srikanth, and K. Srujan Raju, provided valuable insights into modern technological innovations, with a focus on drone technology's applications for medical deliveries and logistics, and explored entrepreneurial aspects like Lean Canvas and intellectual property. They also discussed both present and future innovations in the field.

Outcome of the activity:
